THREATENING TO STICK A KNIFE IN HIS HEART RATHER THAN BE ARRESTED.

Series of Evenis that Greatly Excited a Quiet School on Washington Heights-The Man's Curious Parley with the Police.

Jules Forthomme was a coachman until two weeks ago, when he was called into the kitchen as a cook in Prof. Alfred M. Cotte's institute for boys on Washington Heights. forthomme is about 32 years of age, tall and muscular, and a black beard and moustache gave him a ferocious appearance. Lately he showed an avil disposition, and the inmates of ticed on Sunday afternoon that Cecilia Cotte, a bright little girl, the eight-year-old daughter of the Professor, was extremely nervous, starting at the least noise, and looking behind, as if she feared somebody was about to seize her. Her father took her into his study and asked her t tell him why she was so uneasy. The child hesitated for a time, but after considerable persussion told how Forthomme had seized her in the morning and struck her. He had threatened to kill her if she told anybody, but she told a servant girl. The servant cautioned he threatened to kill her if she said a word to and she trembled as she told it, fearing that the Frenchman would hear of it, and try to kill her. The father quieted her fears, and kept her in the house the rest of the day.

Forthomme slept in a small room adjoining the carriage room in the stable. Early ou Monday morning the Professor went to the stable, and on meeting Forthomme, accused him of the assault. The Frenchman was sullen. He denied that he had harmed the child. The Professor threatened to send for a policeman but the Frenchman showed no signs of fear, and knowing that he was no match for the man in a tussle, the Professor returned to the house and wrote a note to Capt. Steers of the Carmanaville police, asking him to send a policeman to arrest Forthomme. Capt. Steers thought that Policeman Crosby was muscular enough to cope with the Frenchman, and sent him to the Professor's house.

On seeing the noliceman enter the yard forthomme ran into the stable and closed the door. Crosby examined the avenues of escape, and then peeped through a crack in the door. Come a step hirther and I'll steek it to me heart!" the Frenchman cried.

He had thrown off his vest and the bosom of his shirt was open. One hand elenched the handle of the door. The hilt of a long carving knife was against the door, and the other hand steadled the point of the blade against his breast. The blade was about twelve inches in length, sharp as a razor, and ground to a sharp point. He braced his feet, insteat the blade until the point pricked his skin, and waited for the policeman to push the door. But Crosby stepped back and told the Professor to peep through the crack.

"Don't do anything now," the Professor whispered to Crosby, after starting back, pale with tright. "Don't let him murder himself here."

Then they withdrew and had a consultation.

Don't do anything now," the Professor whispered to Orosby, after starting back, pale with tright. "Don't let him murder himself here."

Then they withdrew and had a consultation. Policeman Shoemaker fof the mounted police was hailed and sent to the police station for assistance. Capt. Steers and Sergt, MacAvov hurried to the Institute grounds. The situation was explained and the Captain went toward the stable.

Come an inch more and I'll plunge it to me heart?" the Frenchman cried again, as the Captain in plus his hand on the door.

"Plunge it," the Captain said, in his mind, but concluded to resort to strategy. The Frenchman's eyes were bloodshot, and he was in a terrible rage. The gritting of his teeth could be hoard through the door.

Seven policemen were sent for, and the stable was surrounded. The Frenchman kept his position behind the door, and the Professor Deaged Capt. Steers not to push it open. The man was terribly in earnest, and the Captain thought of shattering the hilt of the knife with a pistol ball, but there was danger of shooting the man, and after parleying with the man for some time, the Captain told his men to withdraw. The blue coats disappeared, and the Frenchman evidently thought that they had given up the attempt to capture him, for he oponed the door and stood in the doorway. The Professor went to him, talked to him quietly, and, after inducing him to throw the knife away, said, as a hint for him to get out of the stable. Jules, I'll give you my word as a French gentleman that I'll not have you arrested in twenty minutes.

The Frenchman retroated into the carriage room and the Professor pulled out his watch. Twenty minutes passed and the allowance was increased to forty minutes. Then the policemen remaining in the with Capt. Steers. The stable was searched, but the Frenchman could not be found. A trap door and a collar door in the Frenchman had secaped to the woods back of the stable. Several policemen were sent to search the woods, others were sent to the railroad track, and mounted p made in dragging him out and clasping hand-ouffs on his wrists. In the Harlem Police Court yesterday he was committed to prison. On passing the prisoner in court the Professor's daughter clung to Capt. Steers's coat and trem-bled with fear.

COX'S LAST BOPE.

Gov. Cornell Refuses to Give the Condemned Murderer a Further Respite.

Chastine Cox was leaning against his cell Acor vesterday when one of the counsel in his case entered. He approached Cox and said: "I have bad news for you, Cox; the Governor has refused to give you a hearing. The mes sage was sent last night, but we only received it to-day. Your counsel will, however, still do all he can to assist you.

"I thank you," said Cox calmly, "but I had no hope, and I'm ready." Warden Finn told Cox he would have to remove him to cell 6. The cox he would have to remove him to coil 6. The keepers quickly filed into Chastine Cox's cell and began searching it. Cox watched them with an expression of despair on his face, as if even the removal from his old cell was part of the ordeal before him. Cell 6 was then emptied, and the Deputy Sheriffs closely examined the new bed, bedding, carpets, and chairs brought in for possible means of suicide.

Father Duranquet, the good Sisters of Mercy, and the flev Mr. Hector, the colored minister, called upon Cox, and all spoke kindly to him, and bade him prepare himself for the worst.

Sheriff Bows and Deputy Sheriff Joel Stevens visited the prison and gave special instructions to their deputies. Warden Finn detailed Deputy Warden Finley to assist the under sheriffs in watching the condemned man.

A Sun reporter had entered the prison, and was talking to Warden Finn, when Cox called to him.

"Tail the colored people," he said, "that I believe I got a fair trial. I could not tell my story, because I am not able to do so; but tell the colored people that I believe that justice was done me, the same as it would have been done to anybody eise. Tell them that I want to die having no ill will to anybody, and that I cannot say anything against Mr. Cornell. I don't think he can have any bad feeling toward me because of my color. But tell them that I am ready to die, and will do so as bravely as I can." keepers quickly filed into Chastine Cox's cell

Sudden Death of a Wealthy English Miller. CHICAGO, July 13.-Frederick Thompson, a wealthy miller of Wakefield, England, who came to this country in May last to attend the Millers' Exhibition in Cincinnati, met his death in a strange manner at Fox Lake, Wisconsin, last Friday. He and a friend named Louis Feischer, of Liverpool, Engiand, took a small hoat togo out on the lake fishing. They had not gone far when Thompson dropped the oars and fell over the side of the boat. Feischer jumped after him, but Thompson, had been the control of the boat. Feischer jumped after him, but Thompson, assistance quickly arrived, and Feischer, we still him. Assistance quickly arrived, and Feischer, we still him and resistance quickly arrived, and Feischer, we still him and resistance duckly arrived, and Feischer, which was recovered. At the inquest the jury found that Thompson son died of heart disease or apoplexy, and that probably he was dead when he struck the water. Thompson was a man of wealth, and was prominenty identified with milling interests in provinces of Engiand and Ireland. He was to have sailed for home on Saturday, and intended to return here in the fall and establish branches of his business in the United States. His, body will be embalmed and forwarded to his friends. Lake, Wisconsin, last Friday. He and a friend name:

a meeting would be held in season for him to attend. Capt. Kipp answered, emphatically. "That! will not do."

That! will not do."

Mr. Voorhis then went to the room of Gen. Smith, who by this time had arrived.

On being admitted to the General's prosence. Mr. Voorhis said: "General, I notice that you are in the occupancy of these rooms, which have been occupied by me up to the present time, I would like to know by what authority you are in possession of them, and, at the same time, to request that you surrender them to my use. "These rooms are under the control of the Police Board." the General answered, "and I have neither the right to take them nor to give them up."

have neither the right to take them nor to give them up."

Then I am to understand that you decline vacating the rooms for my occupancy?" was Mr. Voorhis's next remark.

'I do," was the General's answer.

'Well, then, I will conclude my formal demand that you should vacate them. You understand, General," Mr. Voorhis went on to explain, 'that I am doing this by advice of counsel learned in the law, for the purpose of protecting myself in what I claim to be my rights."

The General smiled an assent, and then an informal conversation on other subjects followed. When it was over Mr. Voorhis made a long call on Commissioner Mason, after which he quitted the building, saying as he did so that he would present himself at the next Board meeting and demand recognition as a Police Commissioner.

meeting and demand recognition as a Police Commissioner.

The Bank of North America and the Importers' and Traders' Bank yesterday notified the Police Department that, in consequence of Mr. Voorhis's prohibition, they would not pay over the police meneys in their possession, amounting to $40,000 or $50,000, until the question of the treasurership of the Police Board had been settled. Mr. Nichola was appointed Treasurer, in the place of Mr. Voorhis, at Sturday's meeting of the Police Board, but he had not qualified when the banks served this notice. It is believed that when he makes a demand for the money, having qualified, the banks will reconsider their decision. The money thus locked up by Mr. Voorhis's action was intended to pay the bills of the Street Cleaning Bureau for June, which were passed upon at Saturday's meeting.

The air vesterday was refreshing, for a day mometer in the shade marked only 87° at the highest. In the sunshine it was very warm, but in the shade it was very constortable. The reason of this contradictory state of the weather was that the atmosphere was clear and dry. There was little locating moisture to interrupt the same rays, and the wester the atmosphere allowed it to absorb persuration rapidly. At 7 velock in the morning the homolity, as recorded at the Signal Service station on the top of the Equitable building, was 30 per cent. The Rumered Ward-Courtney Match. NEWBURGH, July 13 .- Josh Ward, the Cornwall carsman, says he knows nothing of a match between him and Courtney for a race at Middletown, Conn., as stated in a despatch from Hartford this morning. Nobody has had authority from him to make such a match. The culy explanation he can give is that one of his friends may have taken the exponsibility of arraigning for a race, thinking Ward would assent. He is not inclined to go to Connecticut, but will row Courtiev on the Coriwall course, three or five miles, for $500 a side. He says how, ever, that he might be induced to go to Connecticut if the arrangements are satisfactory. He is practising daily.
